

This course aims at leading the student towards an understanding of the unity that underlies the diversity of the social sciences. It is in the shift of the answer to the enduring question how do we understand human nature that ultimately grounds the unity among the various social sciences.

The distinctive features of each of the contemporary social-scientific disciplines can be understood only by understanding the common ground from which they sprang—the transition from late medieval to modern times. The student is first led to see the

As we are in the stage of planning and implementation we will need to have the data before we have a clear picture of what is working and what might need to be changed
